Google is coming to LaGuardia Community College. The internet giant announced this week that it will bring its IT Support Professional Certificate course to the community college in Queens to promote tech literacy and to open the door to more digital economic opportunities for New Yorkers. The program is organized and funded by Grow with Google, the company's economic opportunity division that provides tech tools and training. "Google is committed to training the workforce of today and tomorrow, and we are thrilled to team up with community colleges to help graduates jump-start a new career in IT Support," said Jesse Haines, director of Grow with Google, in a statement. "Community colleges play an important role in helping Americans get ahead, and they will be strong partners in Grow with Google's mission to create more economic opportunities for Americans." LaGuardia Community College is one of 25 community colleges to first get this Google opportunity.

BODY FOUND AT GIANTS
PLAYER JENKINS' HOME

Police are investigating the discovery of a dead body found at the New Jersey home of New York Giants cornerback Janoris Jenkins, authorities confirmed Tuesday. The body was later identified as 25-year-old Roosevelt Rene, who is a family friend of Jenkins, according to police. Rene had reportedly been living at the house of late. The police did not reveal a cause of death. According to multiple reports, police are treating the investigation as a homicide. NFL Network's Mike Garafolo reports police are investigating "a possible strangulation/suffocation as the cause of death," citing law enforcement sources. Multiple reports say Jenkins is not in New Jersey and has been staying in Florida. According to ESPN's Dianna Russini, Jenkins has been in Florida since the Giants broke from their offseason practices, which ended June 14. That report adds that Jenkins had family staying in the New Jersey home and he had plans to return to New Jersey today "to deal with this situation" but might stay in Florida. TMZ reports the body was found in the basement by a person who was working on the house.

PUTIN-TRUMP SUMMIT
TALKS IN THE WORKS

4 U.S. National Security Adviser John Bolton is expected in Moscow on Wednesday for talks with Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov and possibly Vladimir Putin, part of an effort to lay the groundwork for a summit between Putin and President Donald Trump. Bolton, whom the Kremlin regards as an arch Russia hawk, is due to give a news conference after his meetings at 4:30 p.m. GMT, where he might name the date and location of a summit, which the Kremlin has been trying to make happen for months. Trump congratulated Putin by phone in March after the Russian leader's landslide re-election and said the two would meet soon. However, the Russians have since complained about the difficulty of setting up such a meeting. Relations between Washington and Moscow are languishing at a post-Cold War low. They are at odds over Syria, Ukraine, allegations of Russian interference in the 2016 U.S. presidential election and accusations Moscow was behind the poisoning of a former Russian spy in Britain in March.

WILDFIRES THREATEN
NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

5 Four wildfires burned in Northern California on Tuesday, threatening hundreds of homes, while another blaze in an area of New Mexico hard hit by drought will force most of a sprawling national park to close, fire officials said. The most damaging blaze, the Pawnee Fire, burned in Lake County near the Mendocino National Forest, 70 miles northwest of Sacramento. It had destroyed 22 buildings and charred 11,500 acres by Tuesday afternoon, according to the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection (Cal Fire). The fire has forced about 1,500 people to evacuate, said Lt. Corey Paulich of the Lake County Sheriff's Department. California Gov. Jerry Brown declared a state of emergency for Lake County on Monday, freeing up resources. By Tuesday, more than 1,400 firefighters battled the blaze, Cal Fire said. The blaze was 5 percent contained, unchanged from Monday. Lake County has now had at least one damaging wildfire each of the last four years, Paulich said. "I don't recall any fires as big in my first 19 years that we've had in the past four years," said Paulich.

US top court backs Trump on travel ban targeting Muslim-majority nations

All five conservative judges voted in favor of the president's ban.

The U.S. Supreme Court on Tuesday handed Donald Trump one of the biggest victories of his presidency, upholding his travel ban targeting several Muslim-majority countries.

The 5-4 ruling, with the court's five conservatives in the majority, ends a fierce fight in the courts over whether the policy represented an unlawful Muslim ban. Trump can now claim vindication after lower courts had blocked his travel ban announced in September, as well as two prior versions, in legal challenges brought by the state of Hawaii and others.

The court held that the challengers had failed to show that the ban violates either U.S. immigration law or the U.S. Constitution's First Amendment prohibition on the government favoring one religion over another.

"We express no view on the soundness of the policy."

Chief Justice John Roberts

Writing for the court, Chief Justice John Roberts said that the government "has set forth a sufficient national security justification" to prevail.

"We express no view on the soundness of the policy," Roberts added.

Trump responded to the ruling on Twitter, saying "Wow!"

The ruling affirmed broad presidential discretion over who is allowed to enter the United States. It means that the current ban can remain in effect and that Trump could potentially add more countries. Trump has said the policy is needed to protect the country against attacks by Islamic militants.

The current ban, announced in September, prohibits entry into the United States of most people from Iran, Libya, Somalia, Syria and Yemen. The Supreme Court allowed it to go largely into effect in December while the legal challenge continued.

The challengers have argued the policy was motivated by Trump's enmity toward Muslims and urged courts to take into account his inflammatory comments during the 2016 presidential campaign. Trump as a candidate called for "a total and complete shutdown of Muslims entering the United States."

The travel ban was one of Trump's signature hard-line immigration policies, which have been a central part of his presidency and "America first" approach.

Trump issued his first version of the travel ban just a week after taking office, though the courts quickly halted it.

City pols react to Supreme Court upholding Trump Muslim travel ban

While President Donald Trump tweeted "Wow!" in reaction to the Supreme Court upholding his Muslim travel ban Tuesday, many New York City politicians had less joyous responses to the news.

"This ban is institutionalized Islamophobia, promoted under the guise of national security," Mayor Bill de Blasio said in a statement. "Banning people from our country on the basis of religion is an affront to our founding ideals. With this decision, the highest court in the land has sent a message of exclusion and division across the globe. As our president tries to build walls, New York City will continue to welcome people from all over the world to our shores, from all faith traditions. Our values have helped make our city the safest big city in the United States — and they are what make America great."

In a statement, state Attorney General Barbara Underwood called Trump's travel ban "a stain on American history that were rooted in deep anti-Muslim animus and unleashed chaos on families, businesses, institutions and communities throughout New York. Despite today's ruling, New York will continue to serve as a beacon to the world, welcoming people of all faiths, races, nationalities and backgrounds."

The state attorney general's office led coalitions of its counterparts from other states to fight previous Trump administration travel bans that target Muslim-majority countries, and Underwood said her office "won't hesitate to act to protect New York's families and ensure that we live up to the values on which this state and this nation were built."

Public Advocate Tish James also vowed via

GETTY IMAGES

Twitter that the city will "never stop fighting to protect all people in New York, regardless of race, religion or background."

In a tweet, City Council Speaker Corey Johnson called the Supreme Court's decision "a mistake" and "a discriminatory policy, period. The policy came out of Trump's stated desire to achieve 'a total and complete shutdown of Muslims entering the United States.'"

Queens Borough President Melinda Katz tweeted that the Supreme Court "has been on the wrong side of history before. History will judge this decision just as harshly."

The Supreme Court's 5-4 ruling Tuesday held that challengers to the Muslim travel ban did not show it violates U.S. immigration law or the U.S. Constitution's First Amendment prohibition on the government supporting one religion over others.

The current travel ban, which was announced in September, prohibits most people from Iran, Syria, Somalia, Yemen and Libya from entering the U.S. Tuesday's ruling could result in the ban expanding to additional countries.

Trump first issued a version of the Muslim travel ban a week after he took office in January 2017.

L train shutdown questions ramp up ahead of City Council meeting

New Yorkers have nine months to prepare for the L train shutdown, but will the MTA and DOT's mitigation plan be enough?

ELAINE MCCALLIG
letters@metro.us

As it approaches the sixth anniversary of Hurricane Sandy, New York City is still picking up the pieces — and its commuters will soon feel the full brunt of it thanks to the looming L train shutdown.

Next April, a section of one of the busiest subway lines in North America will close for 15 months as the L train's Canarsie Tunnel undergoes a complete reconstruction.

On Wednesday, City

Council will hold a hearing on the L train shutdown between Manhattan and Brooklyn in one of several public discussions about how the city will cope with the closure.

Officials this week also proposed that 14th Street turn into a 17-hour-a-day busway during the shutdown to accommodate misplaced L train riders. But there are still fears that the MTA and DOT's mitigation plan will be inadequate.

All this is due to the 7 million gallons of corrosive salt water that ravaged the 7,110-foot-long Canarsie Tunnel during Hurricane Sandy in October 2012. And despite immediate interim repairs, the MTA says that a full reconstruction of the 94-year-old tunnel is needed.

The MTA estimates that the closure will affect 225,000 daily passengers.

"The amount of work needed to reconstruct the tunnel and make it more resilient for future storms has necessitated years of planning and collaboration with local communities, experts and city agencies like DOT, as well as coordination with other projects systemwide," said MTA rep Shams Tarek.

Taking into consideration the estimate that 70 percent to 80 percent of diverted riders will opt for other lines, service on the J and M lines will be increased and trains on

The MTA said it will shut down the L train between Manhattan and Brooklyn for 15 months beginning in April 2019 to make critical repairs to damage caused by Superstorm Sandy in 2012. ISTOCK the G and C lines will be lengthened.

About 200 more buses will be put on the road, with "high-frequency services" operating across the East River. Cycling connections will be also improved, with Grand Street in Brooklyn becoming a bus and bicycle corridor to the Williamsburg Bridge.

A new temporary ferry service will also be put in place, linking North Williamsburg to Stuyvesant Cove (the terminus of the M14 SBS).

However, Congresswoman Carolyn Maloney fears that the current mitigation plan "has a long way to go."

In a statement following a public forum concerning the L train in Brooklyn, Maloney has called for further detail on where the bus stops will be, how many buses will be on each of the routes and where the new bicycle stands will be located.

Maloney has suggested that a fourth shuttle bus route between 14th Street and Bedford Avenue is needed, and that a bus service should be provided between Bedford Avenue and nearby subway stops.

However, the mitigation plan released by the MTA and DOT is likely to be tweaked before the tunnel is closed next year.

"The alternate service plans for the tunnel reconstruction are being refined; Maloney has been a strong advocate for the community and we will be in touch with her directly," Tarek added.

Wednesday's City Council hearing on the L train shutdown will be held at 1 p.m. at Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law/Brookdale Center at 55 Fifth Ave.

Aging NYC parks need $6 billion in repairs: Report

A report from the Center for an Urban Future details problems plaguing New York City parks, which are an average of 73 years old.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The average New York City park is 73 years old, and according to a new report, that age is starting to show.

The Center for an Urban Future (CUF), a nonprofit public policy think tank, released a report on Tuesday looking at the New York City park system and its aging infrastructure.

Parks in every borough are struggling with "aging assets," according to the report, like drainage systems, retaining walls and bridges.

Aging drainage systems can cause issues like standing water, flooded fields and overflowing sewer systems. Experts cited drainage problems as one of the "most severe infrastructure issues" facing NYC

"But all of those structures — bridges, highways, parks, pools — they're all nearing the end of their natural life. So I'd say a very, very big bill is coming due, in the billions."

parks, per the report.

"New York City was blessed with having a tremendous program of construction during the Works Progress Administration," Adrian Benepe, former Parks Department commissioner under Mayor Michael Bloomberg and senior vice president at the Trust for Public Land, says in the report. "But all of those structures — bridges, highways, parks, pools — they're all nearing the end of their natural life. So I'd say a very, very big bill is coming due, in the billions."

The report estimates that it would cost nearly $6 billion to bring New York City's park system to "a state of good repair" over the next decade.

In an email to Metro, Crystal Howard, a representative for NYC Parks, highlighted the administration's investment in the park system through the $318 million, 65-park Community Parks Initiative and the $150 million Anchor Parks project.

The projects "are bringing the first structural improvements in generations to sites from playgrounds to large flagship parks. Further, as the CUF report notes, Commissioner [Mitchell] Silver's streamlined capital process is bringing these improvements online faster," she said. "Looking forward, initiatives like the newly funded catch basin program and an ongoing capital needs assessment program will ensure that NYC Parks' needs are accounted for and addressed in the years to come."

Former New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg is mulling a run for president in the 2020 election, a source close to him told CBS2.

city's 108th mayor ended in 2013.

If Bloomberg does run in the 2020 election, the now-76-year-old will not only be the oldest person to seek the White House, he will also be the richest, with a net worth estimated at $50.9 billion as of this month, according to Forbes.

When President Donald Trump took office on Jan. 20, 2017, he was the oldest person to occupy the Oval Office at 70 years, seven months and seven days old, breaking a record set exactly 36 years prior by Ronald Reagan, who was just shy of 70.

Bloomberg is the second high-profile New Yorker rumored to be considering a run for president in 2020: Democratic Gov. Andrew Cuomo has been on many pundits' list of potential candidates since almost immediately after the 2016 election, though he has claimed to be focusing on his current race for a third term in Albany.

And of course, native New Yorker Trump is al ready gearing up for a re-election campaign come 2020.

In addition to 2016, when he eventually backed Hillary Clinton, Bloomberg also considered running for president in 2008 and 2012.

Can This Medical Technology Possibly Eliminate Or The Advanced Medical Treatment Every Back & Neck Pain Sufferer Needs To Know

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with two locations in New York City that has made a name for itself by treating the worst cases of back or neck pain.

Here is what every back and neck pain sufferer who has failed to respond to other treatments and does not want surgery should know about one of the best treatment options available today for severe back and neck pain including when, why and where you should consider this treatment to get maximum results.

If you suffer with back, neck or nerve pain, you have probably already tried many treatments ... especially countless pain medications.

Experienced doctors understand that even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for back pain... they are rarely the answer.

In most cases they have minimal, short term results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there is very good option to help relieve the pain.

An option that a lot of back and neck pain sufferers may have never heard of before.

Before we get into these treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated the worst cases of back pain. Patients travel from all over to be treated at one of their clinics for all sorts of joint and muscle pain because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover is a REAL medical treatment. Not some miracle cure you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no one treatment that will help every case of back pain. And we cannot guarantee this treatment will work for you. But this treatment has already helped countless back and neck pain sufferers who had given up hope. I bet many just like you.

What is this treatment? It's called...

Radiofrequency Neurotomy "Radiofrequency Neurotomy" is often referred to as RF for short. Just what is "RF".

RF is a procedure that is based on the concept that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

There are many nerves around your spine and one of their jobs is to sense PAIN.

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to these nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves and slow down the pain

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, the Radio Frequency

Neurotomy is scheduled and performed for longer term relief.

What Results Can You Expect?

Like all real medical procedures... results vary for individual patients. No good and ethical doctor would guarantee any exact results for any procedure... that's just not how things work and it would be less than honest.

That's being said, it is not uncommon for patients to get complete, if not significant relief of their pain shortly after the treatment.

How Long Do The Results Last?

This procedure "impairs" the nerves pain signals... it does not destroy them. Therefore, the results are safe but not completely permanent. But, many patients get relief for 6 months... 12 months.... 18 months for some even longer. The great news is - another procedure can be safely preformed for more relief if necessary.

While we cannot claim this is a complete "permanent cure" ... it can be a godsend for so many who were in constant pain.

Really... what would it be worth if you could get out of pain for long enough so you could start enjoying your everyday life again?

Would it be worth it to be able to finally get a good night's sleep again?

How about being able to go for a simple walk or just do your basic daily chores without worrying about so much pain?

Is It Safe?

Yes. This procedure has been done countless times and continues to have an excellent safety record. It is minimally invasive and is not surgical.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and physical therapy do not offer good enough results.

RF has also been found effective AFTER back surgery when patient's still feel pain.

The pain after a failed back surgery can be debilitating for some and this procedure may be the only thing that helps give you relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain And The "X" Factor

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treatment or not.

Many experts suggest choosing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most advanced technology all under one roof without the need for a surgical center or hospital.

Major Savings In Time And Costs Of Care?

DEPUTIES FIGHT 'ABSURDITY AND INSANITY' OF RUSSIAN LAWS

Analysis

BELYAEV

Metro World Cup correspondent in Moscow

#Homealone on struggle against criminal charges for social media reposts.

Many soccer fans from all over the world were scared to come to the World Cup in Moscow because of local laws. One visitor from Mexico anonymously shared with #Homealone that he learned through the media that people here could be taken into custody for basically any reason. And although that appears not to be true, as authorities have been letting football lovers enjoy the tournament to the maximum, locals are suffering from harsh laws in the country and some deputies are trying to struggle against them.

Here in Russia, Article 282 of the Criminal Code states that punishment of up to six years imprisonment could be implemented for actions aimed at inciting hatred or enmity, as well as humiliation of dignity. Such cases in the country repeatedly appeared in reposts on social media.

For more than six years, critics have been insisting that the bill has no definitive legal definitions, which allows authorities to interpret too widely the very concept of "actions aimed at inciting." For example, activist blogger Andrei Bubeyev from the northwestern city of Tver was released from prison in August 2017 after serving his full term of two years and three months for reposting an article advocating the return of Crimea to Ukraine.

State Duma deputies from the Communist Party and right-wing "Rodina" later submitted a package of bills to eliminate criminal liability for reposts on the Internet and consider it an administrative offence. However, on June 25 it was announced that the supreme court of the country found the proposal contradictory, as it could lead to "de facto decriminalization of the act."

"The Supreme Court's response to this draft law is not critical, but neutral. It points on a number of shortcomings, and we, the authors of the initiative, intend to eliminate them," Aleksey Zhuravlyov, chairman of the party Rodina, stated to the news agency Interfax.

According to the MPs, reposting news and messages on social networks and other online resources cannot be considered a criminal offense.

But #Homealone, together with several other deputies, believes that the struggle against the "absurdity and insanity" of local laws, already called out in the media, could continue for a long time.

Why was Tunisia eliminated from the World Cup? Ask their top scorer's cousin

Taha Yassine Khenissi, Tunisia striker @ESTUNIS_TWEETS

While walking in central Moscow, #HOMEALONE met Rym, a doctor who happened to be a relative of Taha Yassine Khenissi, forward for top division club Espérance Sportive de Tunis and the country's national team. Although her cousin suffered from a thigh tear in May and had to stay in his country during the 2018 World Cup, Khenissi's cousin still decided to support the squad in Russia. "I was so excited to come here and see a player from my family participating in the World Cup. Now I am wondering if he played, would the results be different?" the 27-year-old told Metro.

TUNISIA RESULTS

From this year's World Cup:

- Tunisia vs. England 2-1 loss
- Tunisia vs. Belgium 5-2 loss
- Tunisia vs. Panama Game is scheduled for Thursday.

5

Taha Yassine Khenissi has scored five goals with his national team in 20 appearances.

RYM KHENISSI
Cousin of Taha Yassine Khenissi

Q&A

How is your relationship with Taha?

He is my cousin and our relationship is great. We even used to play [soccer] together when we were children, but I was so bad...

And he was good since the early age?

Yes! He loved and loves playing football. They even used me as a goalkeeper, and were trying to score. [Laughs]

Did you come to the World Cup to support Tunisia?

I came here for many reasons. I used to live in Russia for seven years, and then I came back to Tunisia. Then I knew that the World Cup was going to happen here and that was the best occasion for me to come to the country, meet up with my friends and be present when Tunisia is playing. It's been a long time we did not take part in this tournament.

Are you following the Tunisian team?

I already was on two Tunisia national team games. It was very exciting for me to be present at the stadiums during the World Cup. People are so happy and different — that is what I enjoy most about these international events. You can find a lot of friends, I love it.

Do you feel proud about your cousin, although he couldn't participate in the World Cup this year?

Yes, very much, ever since he started playing professionally in our country and our national club Espérance Sportive de Tunis. That is the most famous team in our country. After just one year playing there he became the best football player and gained a lot of fans.

I think he is a great player, and not because he is my cousin. He believes that football is all his life, so he is always doing his best. For example, he won the best scorer title in the Tunisian championship three times already.

Did your relationship change after he became famous?

No, no, no. He still comes and visits us. We meet at family events and dinners. He is very kind, even though he has a lot of fans. He had to delete himself from Facebook, for example, because people started to create fake accounts with his name and photographs to seduce girls. So, if you try to find him, it is better to do so via Instagram.

Aren't you sad that your cousin is not playing?

I was so excited to come here and see a player from my family participating in the tournament. Now I am wondering if he played, would the results have been different? It must be hard for Taha not to be here and get injured at the last minute. But I hope he will have another chance in the next World Cup!

Did Taha come with you to Russia?

No, he stayed in Tunisia. The coach and the doctor didn't let him go. But we will definitely meet when I return back to my country.

Bellator MMA signs multimillion-dollar deal with streaming service DAZN

You'll now be able to live-stream 22 Bellator MMA events each year with its new partnership with DAZN.

JEFF TOMKO
jeff.tomko@metro.us

Viewing mixed martial arts became a little more online accessible as Bellator MMA announced a new multimillion-dollar partnership with Premier Group's streaming service DAZN at a midtown press conference on Tuesday.

Exact numbers were not announced, although the multiyear deal was said to be in the nine figures.

“We’re now global with our partnership with DAZN to further that mission to bring live fights around the globe.”

Bellator's CEO Scott Coker

“Make no mistake, Bellator is on its way up,” Bellator's CEO Scott Coker said at Tuesday's press conference. “[One of the main goals] was to go international. ... We're now global with our partnership with DAZN to further that mission to bring live fights around the globe.”

As part of the deal, the U.K.-based DAZN will stream 22 Bellator events per year, seven of those being exclusive while the other 15 will be shared with Bellator's current TV partner Paramount. It's the second U.S. deal for DAZN, which recently signed a $1 billion deal with Matchroom Boxing. Both Bellator and Paramount are owned by Viacom.

DAZN, which currently operates in Canada, will begin operations in the U.S. and Italy over the summer. No subscription price has been announced, but CEO James Rushton did say there will be a first-month trial basis for subscribers.

“Our multiyear streaming partnership with Bellator is a significant step in the development of DAZN and our fight sports offering,” Rushton said. “As the new destination for Bellator fans to watch all the action, it's our aim to grow the popularity of the sport on the world stage.”

The added revenue from its partnership with DAZN will help Bellator add even more top-tier “free agent” fighters to its league, as it did by signing former UFC light-heavyweight champion Lyoto Machida last week. Two other recent signings, current middleweight champion Gegard Mousasi and welterweight champion Rory MacDonald, will kick off the new streaming deal when they headline Bellator's Sept. 29 card at San Jose's SAP Center.

No plans have yet been finalized for a Bellator card in New York City, but Coker said that he's hoping to bring an event to New York City at the end of this year or early 2019.

Grumble Editor

It's safe to say that every day the majority of the Grumbles we receive from our readers are in regard to some annoying thing that happens to them on their daily commute. We get it. You're probably reading this while sandwiched in between someone clipping their fingernails and another passenger eating something putrid on the bus or train. Well, today we have two more great transit-themed Grumbles to help you get through it all. Enjoy!

READER WRITE-INS:

LOUD COMMUTERS!

This requires a bit of information before my Grumble. On NJ Transit, there is a quiet commute car. It is the first car on every train.

There are signs posted and sometimes they make announcements and sometimes the ticket takers mention it to people who are not following the rules. So you can't act like you don't know. The rules are simple: 1. Do not talk on your phone and it should be on silent; 2. Do not talk with your fellow passengers; 3. If you listen to music, use headphones.

Now for my Grumble: If you choose to talk, be on your phone or make others listen to your music, go sit in one of the other seven cars where you can do that. Let us commute in peace. And if you are told it is a quiet car by a fellow passenger, don't get angry like it is our fault, just get up, apologize and move cars. Quiet means quiet, not for you to do what you want regardless of rules.

- Jeremy Lackman, Metro US reader

ANIMALS ON PUBLIC TRANSIT!

Yesterday I was on a downtown train when a woman got on with this huge black pitbull dog. Although he did not seem aggressive, I felt fearful and maybe the size of the dog had something to do with that. But he was not a service dog because I have seen service dogs and they have some kind of signage on them to let people know that they are service dogs. I have seen a video on YouTube where a person got on a train with a pitbull and the dog attacked a woman. I'm just saying that I do believe there are laws about getting on public transportation that say that animals should be secured so that passengers can be protected.

Tell us what you think!

@metro newyork

Camp Arlo brings the fun of summer camp without the sleeping outdoors part.

eva.kis@metro.us

Suddenly, all New Yorkers seem to want to do is go back to summer camp. But who wants to sleep on the dirt when all you really desire is the tent aesthetic with campfire food — plus easy access to cocktails?

No need to head to the woods, because glamping has come to the city. The Arlo Soho hotel hit viral-sensation status over the winter after Tentrr brought two large tents into the hotel courtyard with a ski lodge theme. And because the rustic aesthetic of cabin living knows no seasons, the tents have rolled right into summer and become the heart of Camp Arlo.

"We put the tents in there not really knowing what the response would be, and people absolutely just loved them," says Hannah Redfield, head of PR at Arlo Hotels.

Adult campers can relax at picnic tables under striped umbrellas, lounge in Adirondack chairs and, of course, chill out inside those tents, which are decked out with couches, canvas chairs, wood accents, blue plaid throws and paddles (to be fair, you can kayak and canoe right in the city).

The "campsite" has its own themed menu of hot dogs named for famous national parks and cocktails like the Camp Fire (Fireball and cider) and Mosquito Bite (jalapeno mescal margarita).

And because it's not summer without ice cream, Camp Arlo just added a cart by Topsy Scoop serving six boozy flavors like Strawberry Rhubarb Bourbon. You can also satisfy your sweet tooth with a cocktail float courtesy of Muddling Memories.

Oh, there is one hold-over from winter: shots-kis. "It's been very popular since winter," says Redfield. "We couldn't get rid of them! There would've been an up-roar."

The tents can't be reserved, so it's first come, first camped — you can pass the time with the camp's giant versions of Jenga and Connect Four, or a round of cornhole. The tents can hold about six people if you're eating, or up to 10 if you're just hanging out. While temperatures are mild, the tents are comfortable, and Redfield says the hotel is "looking into really fun ways to keep guests cool" before summer arrives in earnest.

Craving the real deal? Tentrr's actual business is "the Airbnb of glamping," as Redfield puts it. Book a tent at your destination of choice, and you arrive to a ready-made campsite with all the essentials.

Camp Arlo is in session through Sept. 30 at 231 Hudson St., weekdays 4-11 p.m. and weekends 10:30 a.m.-11 p.m.

Will binge-watching save late-night TV?

Streaming services have changed the game, but will it work?

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

While Netflix remains the chief streaming outlet for all things stand-up comedy, the service with over 125 million subscribers globally is trying something new: late night. Specifically late-night-style television reminiscent of "The Tonight Show," "The Late Show" and "The Daily Show," all of which are still going strong on broadcast and cable networks.

Netflix is currently airing new episodes of "The Break With Michelle Wolf" every Sunday, while "The Soup" veteran Joel McHale's "The Joel McHale Show With Joel McHale" prepares for brand-new episodes. David Letterman's "My Next Guest Needs No Introduction" recently concluded its short run, but with Hasan Minhaj's recently announced late-night show in the works, Netflix will have no shortage of such programming.

Yet the question remains, does this style of scheduled television work for streaming? Where audiences are now accustomed to watching whatever they want, when they want to? It's called "binge-watching" for a reason, and by releasing new episodes every week (Wolf, McHale) or month (Letterman), the current streaming model suggests it shouldn't work. After all, Chelsea Handler's "Chelsea" ended after two seasons on Netflix after struggling to make it work.

In a recent Variety interview with McHale and Sarah Silverman, host of Hulu's own late-night-

Michelle Wolf's new late-night series debuted in May.

esque "I Love You, America," the former revealed something intriguing about Netflix's otherwise clandestine approach to tracking its viewing numbers.

"We are switching to an all at once [release] because they learned that even though it was coming out every week, people were watching it all at once," he said. "So we're just going to make the shows as if we're just gathering things every week and hopefully the jokes will be funny."

Of course, McHale

Chelsea Handler's move to a streaming service didn't pan out as expected.

doesn't get into the specifics with a streaming rival and a member of the press in the same room, but the point still stands. When it comes to a program like "The Joel McHale Show," which focuses on pop cultural happenings more than any other newsy topics, it seems binge-watching is the way to go.

So what about Wolf's, Silverman's and Letterman's shows? The latter released new episodes on a monthly schedule, and considering the sheer weight of the host (and his guests), Netflix likely had no problem getting eyeballs on it. Yet programs like Wolf's and Silverman's, and presumably Minhaj's when it premieres, rely far more on day-to-day topicality. Targeting an audience that binge-watches everything isn't necessarily an option.

Or is it? As Silverman told McHale in their Variety conversation, "There is no appointment TV." Sure, she might watch weekly releases like "This Is Us," but only "whenever I'm in the mood to watch 'This Is Us' at any given time." This is just one take on the matter, of course, and major shows like "This Is Us" still manage to attract huge numbers chiefly with appointment viewing.

But new research continually shows that binge-watching, especially due to streaming, has significantly changed the way most people watch television. Some viewers have even taken to "binge-racing," by which they will watch all of a show's new season soon after its Friday release, a typical move for Netflix and other major streamers.

Perhaps there is something to Netflix's decision to release new episodes of "The Joel McHale Show" in one big batch. And who knows? Maybe this method, or one just like it, will work for similar late-night-style programs like Wolf's, Silverman's and Minhaj's.

'Three Identical Strangers' is just as heartwarming as it is disturbing

Especially because it is all true.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

It's hard to know exactly how much to reveal about "Three Identical Strangers."

If the award-winning documentary has already come across your radar, you're probably aware that it revolves around the reunion of a set of triplets who were separated at birth, while those of you who are slightly older might well know Bobby Shafan, Eddy Galland and David Kellman because of the celebrity status they acquired in the wake of their extraordinary reunion. But this seemingly heartwarming story has a dark and truly twisted underbelly, which "Three Identical Strangers" hypnotically reveals in a patient and captivating fashion. Director Tim Wardle opens up about his new documentary and explains why he doesn't think those responsible for separating Bobby, Eddy and David as kids are actually "evil."

What was your reaction when you heard Bobby, Eddy and David's story? The first time I heard the story, when it was brought in, I was like, "This is the single greatest story I have ever heard." I am not prone to hyperbole, but it really was like, "This is bonkers." My background was as an idea development guy. I used to do that for the BBC in London. So I've seen a lot of stories and ideas, and you get quite cynical and jaded. You feel like you have seen everything before. It was crazy and it worked on a human level. It was a great human interest story, but it worked on thematic levels, too, as it explored nature versus nurture, free will and destiny, and all that kind of stuff.

Did you ever want to push its release date back and carry on filming as you learned more stuff? All the time. The hardest thing as a documentary filmmaker is knowing when to stop. But the truth is the money kind of ran out. And also we got the film into Sundance, so we had to get the film ready. Because it was such a miracle to get in, so you just had to get it ready and done for that. But it is interesting. One thing I have learned from this film is, when I started I thought we had to answer everything, we had to have all of the answers by the end. What I realized was that, by the end — this is probably only true for documentary rather than drama — actually, it doesn't matter if you don't have all the answers. Sometimes it is actually good if it is more open-ended, and people actually have more questions at the end. That was a real revelation to me that not answering everything could be a positive thing.

Do you think the twin study that David, Bobby and Eddy were part of represents the evil side of America?

It is a central irony of the film that Neubauer, who did the study, and David's family both came to this country from Austria fleeing the Holocaust and then ended up on either side of this experiment. I'm not Jewish, but my wife is Jewish, and she finds watching it really tough because Jewish people are not meant to do this to other Jewish people. We get a very strong reaction from Jewish people watching it. I personally don't see the people that did this as evil, grinning Nazis.

There's that period in the '60s. It was kind of like the Wild West of psychology, where all of these experiments, they would never get passed by an ethics committee now. But people were pushing the envelope. I am interested in the gray areas of human behavior. It is like what is going on in the States at the moment. It is horrific, but some of those policies were put in place by people that aren't evil people. They just probably didn't think through the human cost and impact of what they were doing.

It's been 20 years since American readers first met Harry Potter in his cupboard under the stairs in "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone" and he became the wizard to (spoiler alert?) bring peace to the magical world — more or less, anyway.

That means those of you who discovered the series as kids and teenagers are also 20 years older, likely with children of your own. And while the Boy Who Lived remains near and dear to your hearts, your tastes have probably grown beyond wearing your Hogwarts house crest and collegiate Quidditch gear.

This Fawkes lamp is rather clever, no?

For those who may want to declare their fan-nish love in a lower-key way, retailers have been busy crafting collections of Wizarding World products for the kitchen, bedroom and beyond to add more sophisticated pops of magic to your muggle life:

This artist creates furniture by biting and scratching wood

CONTRIBUTED BY NIK BENTEL

Nik Bentel used all possible methods when trying to carve wood, including biting and chewing the material to shape it.

DANIEL CASILLAS
MWN
letters@metro.us

In today's modern world, furniture manufacturing has become almost completely automated, which makes it pretty difficult to find handcrafted pieces. Taking this into account, and noting that the manufacturing of certain pieces of furniture requires materials from up to five different countries, New York-based designer Nik Bentel decided to start a different and somewhat strange project: He sought to create furniture with his own hands, teeth and nails. Bentel used all possible methods to try to carve the wood to precise measurements, which included biting and chewing the wood to shape it.

Q&A

NIK BENTEL
New York-based designer

How did the idea to create this project come about?

About two years ago, I remember getting into my car and driving to the grocery store, which was just two blocks away from my apartment. When I walked in the door, I stopped and realized just how ridiculous it was to not just walk to the store.

Our everyday objects have completely redesigned our world. It's as if we do not need our human bodies anymore! At that moment, I realized I needed to document this, but in the most absurd way as possible.

What is the objective of the project?

In order to manufacture a typical stool, materials need to come from five different countries on two continents. Hundreds of different tools, machines and processes need to be used for the stool to just get to your living room. That seems like a lot of work just to sit down! What if anyone could make a stool completely from scratch and eliminate all that unnecessary shipping, all of the large factories and excess materials? The objective is to reinsert the human back into the human experience.

Why did you decide to bite and scratch the wood to create your works?

The project is supposed to question all of the everyday objects around us, including their manufacturing techniques. Would we have the same comfort in life without all of the many things we own? Would we be more in touch with our bodies?

Isn't that dangerous?

Ha-ha, yes, it was but I survived!

Did you hurt yourself at all?

Yes, I primarily got a lot of splinters and I had to take a few breaks so I could recover.

Do you have any other similar projects in mind?

Yes! I will be releasing two more projects that discuss design similarly to this project. For instance, in the next video, I design and patent myself into a furniture collection!

How long until Yankees trade Clint Frazier?

The Yankees sent Clint Frazier down to the minors again. Is it just a matter of time before he's traded?

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

New York Yankees General Manager Brian Cashman recently went on record saying that he wants to get starting pitching help but does not want to deal 24-year-old outfielder Clint Frazier to get it.

But the way the Yankees are treating the promising slugger is suggesting otherwise.

Monday saw the franchise option Frazier to triple-A Scranton/Wilkes-Barre for a second time this season. After a brief one-game stint in May, Frazier lasted just seven games with the big club in June before other teams among the Yankees' roster derailed his MLB career once again.

After placing Gary Sanchez on the disabled list due to a strained right groin, the Yankees called up catcher Kyle Higashioka and reliever Giovanni Gallegos. The latter was brought in to lengthen the Yankees bullpen, which has struggled as of late.

It's a shrewd move by the Yankees considering Frazier was batting .350 in eight games this season. His bid for his first home run of the season on Sunday was interfered by the speaker system suspended from the roof at Tropicana Field in Tampa.

Now it's back to the minors for a player who frankly should not be there. In 42 games this season in triple-A, Frazier is slashing .302/.387/.550 with eight home runs and 12 RBI, numbers that would make almost any other team in the league give him the call for a permanent stay in the majors.

An embarrassment of offensive riches though

The Yankees sent down Clint Frazier to triple-A Scranton/Wilkes-Barre yet again. Should they trade him instead of wasting him in the minors? GETTY IMAGES makes Frazier an option instead of a priority and it's an option that should be turned around to address serious team needs.

It's no surprise that the Yankees have to pick up another starting pitcher before this summer's trade deadline. Jordan Montgomery is out for the season and Masahiro Tanaka is on the shelf as well after a mishap running the bases at Citi Field. The pitchers that are left outside of ace Luis Severino, a serious AL Cy Young candidate, simply won't cut it.

Sonny Gray's ERA is flirting with 5.00, Domingo German has been wildly inconsistent in nine starts and the book is still out Jonathan Loaisiga, though he's had a promising start to his Yankees career.

A true No. 2 starter behind Severino is needed and while rumors of an intercity trade for Jacob deGrom or Noah Syndergaard have cooled down a bit, the Yankees are going to have to give up something sizable for an arm like Cole Hamels, J.A. Happ or Chris Archer.

Frazier could be just that, especially if he continues to struggle to find playing time in a Yankees outfield that already features Aaron Judge, Giancarlo Stanton, Brett Gardner and Aaron Hicks.

Mets' gloves are almost as bad as their bats

If you're into brainteasers, I have a game for you. Most Mets fans have been attempting to answer this question all season, but the old adage of misery loving company should apply here. So it's only fair that we open it up to the entirety of New York City.

How many ways can the Mets lose a baseball game?

Most of the stress has been placed on the offense and its inability to plate any runs. Despite a general upturn in pitching over the past seven weeks, including the Cy Young emergence of Jacob deGrom, New York is averaging just 3.99 runs per game. Only six teams in the majors average less than that.

Yoenis Cespedes will seemingly never come back from a hip injury as he's already missed over half the season and manager Mickey Callaway is forced to trot out lineups that might do well in no higher than triple-A. The team's .232 batting average is third-worst in the league.

But hold on, Mets fans. There's more ineptitude in other aspects of your roster.

Monday night's 6-4 loss to the Pittsburgh Pirates, which was good for the Mets' seventh-straight defeat, was headlined by a pair of errors from third baseman Luis Guillorme. A natural shortstop forced to play third due to the general poor makeup of the roster, Guillorme bobbled an early grounder that would result in a run while air-mailing a third-inning chance over first baseman Kevin Plawecki, a natural catcher.

Go figure.

He accounted for two of three errors the Mets had on the day, the third coming in the form of Asdrubal Cabrera miffing a ground ball at second.

It continues the worrying trend of bad fielding, though a lot of it has to do with Callaway's shuffling.

The Mets have had the fifth-least amount of defensive chances in the majors yet are tied for the eighth-most errors in Major League Baseball. Their .982 fielding percentage as a team is tied for sixth-worst and their defensive runs saved mark of -47 is third worst.

Just add it to the long list of broken things with this franchise. JOE PANTORNO

FIRST GOALLESS DRAW GOOD FOR DANES, FRENCH

For the first time at the 2018 FIFA World Cup, we had a scoreless draw as France and Denmark could not muster a single goal to help close out Group C play.

Regardless, it was just the result each side was searching for.

The draw ensured that France won the group while Denmark was able to hold off Peru and Australia to finish opening play with five points.

It is the first time since 2002 that Denmark will appear in the Round of 16 at the World Cup.

PERU SNAGS HISTORIC GOALS, WIN

Talking about consolation prizes isn't necessarily a good thing in sports but Peru had a day for the ages in being eliminated from World Cup play.

An 18th minute goal by Andre Carrillo was the first scored by a Peruvian at the competition since 1978.

Star striker Paolo Guerrero made it twice as nice with another tally in the 50th minute. It is Peru's fifth win ever at the World Cup over five appearances dating back to 1930.

ROJO SAVES ARGENTINA FROM DISASTER

Argentina held off elimination thanks to Marcos Rojo's 86th-minute winner, ensuring his side would take second in Group D. Victor Moses' penalty canceled out Lionel Messi's opener, his first goal of the tournament.

It snapped a 660-minute goal drought since his last World Cup goal, the longest of his career. He also became the third Argentinian to score at three-different World Cups. He would come close to a second in the 33rd minute when his free kick was saved off the post.

CROATIA TOPS OFF PERFECT GROUP STAGE

Croatia is the first side at the 2018 World Cup to complete a perfect group stage after a late winner over Iceland. It dominated possession, but didn't break through until the 53rd minute via Milan Badelj's volley. Gylfi Sigurdsson drew the Iceland level with a penalty, but it wasn't enough as Ivan Perisic's strike put Croatia up for good in the final minute.

The three wins in 2018 is more than Croatia has had in its previous three World Cup appearances.

Is Finding The Best Treatment For Your Knee Arthritis Pain Worth 30 Seconds To You?

What if... there was a way to finally get straight answers about the most cutting-edge medical treatments for knee arthritis available today...

Answers from REAL MEDICAL DOCTORS who are experts in this field...

Doctors that have already treated THOUSANDS of knee arthritis sufferers...

Doctors who will tell you exactly what your best options are and what can realistically be expected... without making huge (and false) claims... just to sell a product or service... and then deliver junk that does little or nothing for your pain? Well... now you can.

Here is how...

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with 2 locations in New York City that has medical doctors specially trained in some of the most advanced, cutting edge knee arthritis treatments available today.

And they have put together an information kit that details some of these advanced medical procedures that have already helped thousands.

Including... what you need to know about joint lubricating injections, platelet rich plasma (PRP), stem cell therapy... and more.

This free information kit contains a video and report that will also explain the two arthritis treatments paths you should know about and what "Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology" is and why it has already helped so many arthritis sufferers.

How To Get Your Information Kit...

All you have to do is go to painmdny.com/knee and click the button that says "Click here to get a free knee arthritis treatment info kit."

Then put your name and email address in the space provided and you will be emailed a video and PDF report detailing what treatment options could be the best for your arthritis pain and how we might be able to help you.

We will also send you a way to get a free screening to see if you qualify for one of the advanced medical treatments. It is 100% free with no further obligation.

If you are interested in the screening... awesome. If not, that's ok, too... at least you will have all the information and options.

And if you don't have email... you can click the red "knee pain" button and you will instantly watch a video detailing some of your best options. If you are looking for proof... I think you will find it on this website.

After getting this information and watching the video... you will breathe a big sigh of relief knowing what your best options are and what treatments might finally relieve some or even all of your knee arthritis pain.

And let's be crystal clear about this... NYC Pain MD is a real medical clinic with real medical doctors.

You will be getting real quality information about real medical treatments.

This is NOT some fake "wonder cure." In fact... you will NEVER see any guarantee of results. This is because... in the world or science and real medicine... Guaranteeing results is impossible.

Every patients is different... and so are the results. Any doctor (or marketer!) telling you different is lying to you. I have seen some of the "miracle cure" ads that are everywhere. I bet you have too.

That being said... We will be completely upfront and honest with you. Refreshing... isn't it?

So... if you are looking for up to date... honest information about some of the best possible medical treatments for knee arthritis pain...

Go here painmdny.com/knee and request the information kit or just watch the videos on that page.

Or if you would like to reserve a free screening before they are all gone call 877-228-5490 right now.

Have you experienced a life-threatening or traumatic event?

This could be something that happened to you directly, something you witnessed, or something that happened to your close family/friends.

Since the trauma, have you experienced posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) symptoms such as:

- Nightmares or flashbacks?
- Feeling jumpy or anxious?
- Being less interested in people or activities?

Icahn School of Medicine is conducting a PET/MR imaging research study to look at inflammation as it relates to stress and PTSD. You may be eligible to participate if you have experienced a trauma that could cause PTSD and are between 30-65 years old.

Participation involves a thorough psychiatric and medical screening and a PET scanning visit. You will be compensated for your time.

Please contact Brittany Cho at (212)-241-7906 or at brittany.cho@mssm.edu.
